"Thomas Pringle's Plantation"

Shaw, Damian

Shaw, Damian. "Thomas Pringle's Plantation." Environment and History 5, no. 3 (Oct, 1999): 309–323. doi:10.3197/096734099779568281 . Thomas Pringle (1789–1834) was perhaps the most famous of the British settlers who landed at the Cape in 1820. He exerted an enormous influence on subsequent poetic and literary representations of Southern Africa. In this article, Shaw investigates how Pringle's early experience as a settler moulded his attitude to the Cape landscape, and how he represented this in his early poetry. In this early poetry we see the germ of various attitudes towards the environment which are expressed later in the works of John Croumbie Brown. All rights reserved. © 1999 The White Horse Press
