Environment & Society Portal

Multimedia Library Collection: Environment and History (journal)

"George Perkins Marsh: The Times and their Man"

Judd, Richard W.

Judd, Richard W. "George Perkins Marsh: The Times and their Man." Environment and History 10, no. 2, "The Nature of G.P. Marsh: Tradition and Historical Judgement" special issue (May, 2004): 169–90. doi:10.3197/0967340041159821 . David Lowenthal is correct in suggesting that George Perkins Marsh was America's most influential mid-nineteenth-century conservationist. Lowenthal's biography, however, fails to address Marsh's intellectual and social 'times'. This article challenges the premise that Marsh was unique in laying out an ecological justification for conservation. It suggests that these principles were common currency in early American natural history. Drawing on theological and evolutionary thinking, naturalists searched for patterns of purpose and interrelatedness in nature, and this quest laid the groundwork for ecological consciousness and conservation thinking, well before publication of Marsh's Man and Nature. All rights reserved. © 2004 The White Horse Press

Download:
PDF: https://www.environmentandsociety.org/sites/default/files/key_docs/judd-10-2.pdf

Related links:

- Environment and History at The White Horse Press
  http://www.erica.demon.co.uk/EH.html

Websites linked in this text:

- http://dx.doi.org/10.3197/0967340041159821

Environment and History (journal) Collection, Multimedia Library, Environment & Society Portal
"George Perkins Marsh: The Times and their Man"
Source URL: http://www.environmentandsociety.org/node/3195
Print date: 29 November 2026 00:17:15