> While a large mass movement is nice (and needed), an "army of one" can and will get the job done. Activist taking action on their own can be powerful. When an activist can't join a demonstration, set up an outreach table or create a group, they are not out of options. Those of us who can't or don't want to be part of a big movement may instead take a 007 approach to activism by using COINTELPRO-type tactics to crack our enemy's resolve.
