"The Politics of Conservation in France in the 19th Century"

Matagne, Patrick

Matagne, Patrick. "The Politics of Conservation in France in the 19th Century." Environment and History 4, no. 3 (Oct., 1998): 359–367. doi:10.3197/096734098779555583 . Everything concerning the domain of nature conservation is rich in paradoxes and contradictory interests: the romantic ideal; the established scientific facts; economical and colonial interests; patriotic feelings; moral, ethical and aesthetic arguments. Matagne shows how French conservation policies in the 19th century interpreted these conflicts and paradoxes through three important issues: i) the protection of landscapes; ii) the protection of animal and vegetable species; and iii) nature conservation in the colonies.
