"Facing the Forest: European Travellers Crossing the Mucuri River Valley, Brazil, in the Nineteenth Century"

Duarte, Regina Horta

Duarte, Regina Horta. "Facing the Forest: European Travellers Crossing the Mucuri River Valley, Brazil, in the Nineteenth Century." Environment and History 10, no. 1 (Feb., 2004): 31–58. doi:10.3197/096734004772444405 . Between 1816 and 1859, some European travellers visited the Mucuri River Valley, part of the Brazilian territory where the Atlantic Forest once flourished. From the travellers' accounts, Duarte discusses the conditions of exploration, and some aspects of the historical changes that took place in that territory. Their reports comprise a rich documentation for the debate that is still alive on varied interactions among human societies and transformations of the natural environment. The tropical forests remain a challenge to be faced. All rights reserved. © 2004 The White Horse Press
