Environment & Society Portal

Multimedia Library Collection: Books & Profiles

Inventing Medieval Landscapes: Senses of Place in Western Europe

Howe, John, and Michael Wolfe, eds.

All rights reserved. © 2002 University Press of Florida

Howe, John, and Michael Wolfe, eds. Inventing Medieval Landscapes: Senses of Place in Western Europe. Gainesville: University Press of Florida, 2002.

> Far from the forest primeval of popular imagination, the historians and literary scholars in this book describe a Western European landscape just as consciously constructed by its inhabitants as any modern landscape—physically, conceptually, and spiritually. All appearing for the first time in print, their essays provide a wealth of detail on this "deep ecology" of the Middle Ages and a better understanding of the creativity and skill of our cultural ancestors. — University Press of Florida website .

John Howe is a professor of history at Texas Tech University. Michael Wolfe is a professor of history and the head of the Division of Arts and Humanities at Pennsylvania State University, Altoona College.

Related links:

- H-Environment, H-Net Reviews, reviewed by Richard C. Hoffmann
  http://www.h-net.org/reviews/showrev.php
- University of Press Florida site featuring this book
  http://www.upf.com/book.asp

Websites linked in this text:

- http://upf.com/book.asp?id=HOWEXS02

Books & Profiles Collection, Multimedia Library, Environment & Society Portal
Inventing Medieval Landscapes: Senses of Place in Western Europe
Source URL: http://www.environmentandsociety.org/node/5065
Print date: 07 November 2026 19:08:58