

Multimedia Library Collection:

Holland, Alan, "Editorial: Unstable Cliffs"

Holland, Alan. "Editorial: Unstable Cliffs." Environmental Values 15, no. 4 (2006): 423–24.
doi:10.3197/096327106779116087 .

Doing the right thing by the environment might be more a matter of starting from the practice of a particular virtue - the avoiding of sentimentality - than a matter of signing up to some environmentalist principle. What I find congenial about this thought - but not I hope more congenial than I have reason to find it - is that it helps to resolve the vexed question of where an environmental philosopher's priorities should lie. Is she or he a philosopher first, and an environmentalist second, or vice-versa? Well, a philosopher - a lover of wisdom and truth - must surely therefore be a hater, and avoider, of sentimentality. And if the avoidance of sentimentality, in turn, directs one into the path(s) of environmentalism, the vexed question receives a neat solution. An environmental philosopher is one who arrives at their environmentalism through their philosophy. I should not mind if there were a touch of idealism or even optimism about this thought. But if there is even a whiff of sentimentality about it - then perish the thought!
(Source: The White Horse Press)

© 2006, The White Horse Press. Republished with permission.

Download:

PDF: https://www.environmentandsociety.org/sites/default/files/key_docs/ev_15no.4_holland_alan.pdf

Related links:

- Article on the official website
<http://www.ericademon.co.uk/EV/EditEV154.html>
- The White Horse Press
<http://www.ericademon.co.uk/>

Websites linked in this text:

- <http://dx.doi.org/10.3197/096327106779116087>

- <http://www.ericademon.co.uk/EV/EditEV154.html>