This issue of Earth First! focuses on wilderness recovery in New England. Also, Roger Sansterre calls attention to stopping ski area development in Quebec, Canada, Dan Dagget puts light on the endangered American jaguars, and Alan R. Drengson contributes an essay about paganism, nature, and deep ecology.

> If we accept current hypotheses about human origins, we must acknowledge that humans lived for a long time without the benefit of what we now call science. Our distant ancestors did not live in cities or villages, but in the wilderness.
