Environment & Society Portal

Multimedia Library Collection: Periodicals

"Understanding of and Vision for the Environmental Humanities"

Hutchings, Rich

Hutchings, Rich. "Understanding of and Vision for the Environmental Humanities." Environmental Humanities 4, no. 1 (2014): 213-220. doi:10.1215/22011919-3615007.

My personal vision for the Environmental Humanities is to see increased focus in three overlapping areas: (a) holistic critical theory, specifically the union of natural and cultural "critical heritage studies" ; (b) critical pedagogy, particularly the merging of natural and cultural heritage pedagogies, including efforts toward recognizing teaching as action and the classroom as "the field" and "decolonizing" the classroom via holistic and critical environmental education; and (c) heritage stewardship, including critical analysis of "resource management" and the development and implementation of alternative approaches. (Text from author)

© Rich Hutchings 2014. Environmental Humanities is available online only and is published under a Creative Commons license (CC BY-NC-ND 3.0).

Download:
PDF:
https://www.environmentandsociety.org/sites/default/files/key_docs/environmental_humanities-2014-hutchings-213-20.pdf

Related links:

- Environmental Humanities website
  http://environmentalhumanities.org/
- Environmental Humanities Vol. 4
  http://environmentalhumanities.dukejournals.org/content/4/1.toc

Periodicals Collection, Multimedia Library, Environment & Society Portal
"Understanding of and Vision for the Environmental Humanities"
Source URL: http://www.environmentandsociety.org/node/8067
Print date: 08 November 2026 14:10:04