

Multimedia Library Collection: Earth First! Movement Writings

Forest Voice 8, no. 2

Forest Voice 8, no. 2, front page.

© Native Forest Council

The copyright holder reserves, or holds for their own use, all the rights provided by copyright law, such as distribution, performance, and creation of derivative works.

Forest Voice, 8, no. 2 (1995). Environment and Society Portal. Multimedia Library.
<http://www.environmentandsociety.org/node/8139>.

This issue of Forest Voice, a publication of the Native Forest Council, showcases the work of the NFC, of other activist groups, and of citizens to investigate legal action on forest plans. It focuses on Congress efforts to sneak unlimited “salvage” logging past the law and the people. Victor Rozek draws a connection between inflammatory rhetoric and violence. In his column, Howie Wolke reflects on the large-scale grassroots “uprising” as a strategy for conservation groups dealing with politicians.

The flaw of the free market, as it has devolved in our time, is that it is fundamentally undemocratic and anything but free. Where they clash, agendas of corporations will always supersede the interests of the citizenry when weighed by a corrupt government. As applied to the forest issue, the power of money has rendered laws, science, the public welfare, and economic accountability, meaningless. The forests have already, in effect, been privatized, with the timber industry reaping all of the benefits but none of the responsibilities of ownership.

—Tim Hermach

© 1995 Native Forest Council. All rights to articles appearing in Forest Voice are reserved but the publisher writes “we are pleased to allow reprinting if credit is given.” Due to the inclusion of copyrighted material (done with reference to U.S. fair use doctrine), this issue cannot be republished in the EU.

The Rachel Carson Center’s Environment & Society Portal makes archival materials openly accessible for purposes of research and education. Views expressed in these materials do not necessarily reflect the views or positions of the Rachel Carson Center or its partners.

Websites linked in this text:

- <http://www.carsoncenter.uni-muenchen.de/index.html>