> From time to time, we like to draw your attention to new research in the field of Canadian environmental history. We interview authors about new books, we speak with graduate students about their dissertations and theses.
>
> To draw some attention to this work, I sat down with two NiCHE editors – Tina Adcock from Simon Fraser University and Claire Campbell from Bucknell University – to discuss some new articles and book chapters in Canadian environmental history. We each selected one article or book chapter that we had read recently and asked the others to read it too. We then got together to talk more about our selections. (From Nature's Past)
