Multimedia Library Collection: Sound & Vision

"Anna Barcz on the Historiography of Rivers"

Kępski, Michał, and Anna Barcz

Kępski, Michał, and Anna Barcz. "Anna Barcz on the Historiography of Rivers." Blue History Network Podcasts, episode 3, 13 June 2025, 57:56, https://bluehistorynetwork.org/historiography-of-rivers/ .

In this episode, Michał Kępski (PhD candidate at Adam Mickiewicz University) speaks with Anna Barcz (associate professor at T. Manteuffel's Institute of History) about her research on the historiography of rivers. They explore how the meaning and terminology of rivers have shifted across disciplines and historical periods, and what defines or does not define a river. Their conversation highlights a gap in the literature concerning the interdisciplinary study of rivers, both as physical entities and cultural symbols. Barcz also reflects on the role of rivers in places like Poland, where the absence of major European rivers has shaped unique narratives, often linked to national identity and patriotism. (Source: Blue History Network)

In this podcast episode, Michał Kępski speaks with Anna Barcz about her research on the historiography of rivers focusing on the interdisciplinary study of rivers, both as physical entities and cultural symbols.

© 2025 Roosevelt Institute for American Studies / Blue History Network. All rights reserved. Used by permission.

Related links:

- Blue History Network
  https://bluehistorynetwork.org/
- Blue History Network Podcasts
  https://bluehistorynetwork.org/podcasts/

Websites linked in this text:

- https://bluehistorynetwork.org/historiography-of-rivers/
- https://bluehistorynetwork.org/historiography-of-rivers/

Sound & Vision Collection, Multimedia Library, Environment & Society Portal
"Anna Barcz on the Historiography of Rivers"
Source URL: http://www.environmentandsociety.org/node/9974
Print date: 04 November 2026 21:32:48